Participation in the Political Process

As one of the nation's leading technology and communications companies, CenturyLink plays a key role advocating for policies and practices that benefit our customers and our company. The communications industry remains asymmetrically regulated with incumbents saddled with state and federal regulatory obligations that do not apply to new, powerful competitors such as Facebook, Amazon, Microsoft and others. Elected and appointed public officials face new content-related consumer issues such as privacy, net neutrality and cybersecurity and must make challenging decisions that directly affect our ability to provide quality communications services and compete in a rapidly evolving marketplace.

Our active participation in the political process is essential to ensure that we have a voice in those decisions. At CenturyLink, we are committed to advocating public policy solutions that best serve our customers, our shareholders, our employees, and the communities we serve. CenturyLink believes that participation in the political process is critical to our core business because legislative and regulatory decisions made at all levels of government – federal, state and local – have a direct impact on our ability to make key business decisions and compete for Enterprise and Consumer customers. Advocacy is an important means of maintaining a viable operating environment, electing business-minded candidates and enhancing shareholder value. We also believe it better serves our business interests by creating a more informed and balanced policy-making process.

CenturyLink participates in the political process in several ways including executing a public affairs strategy designed to inform elected and appointed officials of key public policy issues related to the company's business; political giving through employee-funded federal and state political action committees; corporate political giving where legally allowed; and membership in industry and business trade associations which help to advance our overall business objectives.

CenturyLink also values transparency in this process and appreciates the need for disclosure of our political activity to promote ethical corporate governance and confidence in the democratic process. The company's corporate political contributions and those of its political action committees are disclosed in accordance with applicable federal and state campaign finance laws, and this Political Contributions Report contains additional information which is not otherwise required to be disclosed.

We also file quarterly reports regarding our U.S. federal lobbying activities, as well as mid-year and yearend reports regarding our U.S. federal political contributions, with the Office of the Clerk of the U.S. House of Representatives and the Secretary of the U.S. Senate. These reports are available by searching for "CenturyLink" as a "Registrant" on the U.S. Senate's website below: http://www.senate.gov/legislative/Public Disclosure/LDA reports.htm.

Core Principles for Participation

CenturyLink's participation in the political process is guided by a set of core principles that govern our corporate policies on lobbying, political spending and general engagement in the process.

CenturyLink works with members of government, others in our industry, the broader business community, our customers and the public to advocate public policies that support our customers' interests and our business goals. The company's public policy positions and agenda are guided each year by our company's Vision and Unifying Principles.

- In general, CenturyLink is supportive of public policies that promote our business operations generally; promote competition, choice and free markets in the delivery of communications services; and are in the best long-term interest for our customers, shareholders and CenturyLink.
- Political spending by CenturyLink, both with corporate dollars and through our political action committees, will reflect the company's interests and be used to further our public policy positions and agenda and not the personal agenda of individual directors, officers or employees.
- CenturyLink will not make political contributions based upon party affiliation or client pressure. No campaign contribution will be given in anticipation of, in recognition of, or in return for an official act. Similarly, CenturyLink prohibits political contributions for the purpose of influencing or attempting to influence the award of business to the company.
- CenturyLink adheres to all federal, state and local laws and regulations governing the political process and has established internal policies, personnel and procedures to ensure compliance with these requirements.

Political Action Committee Contributions

CenturyLink has established voluntary, nonpartisan employee-funded political action committees ("PACs") that are legally recognized organizations that accept employee contributions and make expenditures to support candidates for elected office. These employee PACs allow eligible employees, as defined by federal and state law, to pool their resources to support candidates for office who generally, but not always, support the public policies supported by the Company. Eligible employees are encouraged to make contributions to a CenturyLink-sponsored PAC; however, CenturyLink does not require participation, carry out retaliatory actions against employees who do not participate, or attempt to influence employee contributions or political activities in any manner.

The CenturyLink, Inc. Employees' Political Action Committee ("CenturyLink PAC") is a federal political action committee, registered and monitored by the Federal Elections Commission, established to encourage employee participation in the political process, and to make contributions to qualified candidates for public office. The CenturyLink PAC provides company employees with a convenient and meaningful way to participate in the electoral process, learn more about key issues, as well as collectively support public policy positions that are important to CenturyLink, regardless of political party affiliation.

The CenturyLink PAC's disbursement of funds is made in accordance with a budget, and the same contribution criteria identified in the "Core Principles for Participation" section above are considered in determining CenturyLink PAC disbursements. Throughout the year, members of the company's Public Policy organization and associate PAC members offer recommendations for CenturyLink PAC disbursements. CenturyLink PAC contributions are approved by the CenturyLink PAC's Board of Trustees, which is comprised of management employees from various CenturyLink business units and management levels within the company. A listing of the Board of Trustees and officers of the CenturyLink PAC follows this discussion.

The CenturyLink PAC operates pursuant to all relevant state and federal laws, and complies with all public disclosure requirements. Information about the CenturyLink PAC's contributions may be found on the Federal Election Commission's website, www.fec.gov.

CenturyLink also operates 10 separate state employee PACs, which are funded by a combination of voluntary employee contributions, transfers from the CenturyLink PAC, and corporate political contributions. These state PACs are governed in a manner similar to that of the CenturyLink PAC, each having a board of trustees or similar governing body.

Corporate Political Contributions

While federal law prohibits CenturyLink from making corporate contributions to federal candidates, CenturyLink makes direct contributions to support state candidates, political parties, political action committees, and ballot measures in those states where such corporate contributions are allowed by law and may make in-kind contributions, such as hosting a reception and paying expenses associated with the event. In addition to the considerations listed in the "Core Principles for Participation" section above, certain criteria are considered in making corporate political contributions, including, but not limited to, the following:

- Candidate's voting record or announced positions on issues important to CenturyLink and our customers
- Candidate's demonstrated leadership on key committees of importance to our business
- □ Impact of contribution on the campaign
- □ Impact of contribution in a state or district where CenturyLink has a large concentration of employees, customers, and/or facilities

Each year, the company's Board of Directors reviews and approves a maximum limit on the aggregate amount of corporate political contributions that may be made, and authorizes only political contributions that are permitted by, and in strict compliance with, applicable law. Throughout the year, members of the company's Public Policy organization make recommendations for corporate contributions. The Senior Vice President, Public Policy and Government Relations must approve each corporate contribution. Advance approval must be obtained for cash contributions to individuals or organizations able to receive corporate contributions, use of corporate facilities, discounts, or other items having monetary value. CenturyLink does not make corporate political contributions to candidates for federal office.

Trade Association Memberships and Related Engagements

Like most major corporations, CenturyLink is a member of a number of national and state industry and business trade associations (organized under section 501(c)(6) of the Internal Revenue Code) to help advance our public policy agenda and related business goals. CenturyLink believes that membership in these associations is generally consistent with the company's interests and plays a valuable role in bringing a collective voice to the political process. CenturyLink also understands that not all members of an association will come to agreement on every issue. Even when CenturyLink does not share the view of one of these associations, we still believe that membership is worthwhile because these associations encourage dialogue and help to move the industry to a consensus on important policy issues. However, CenturyLink does take these situations into consideration when determining annual membership.

Payments to industry and business trade associations are subject to the same criteria listed in the "Core Principles for Participation" section above.

CenturyLink has a rigorous approval process for contributions to industry and business trade associations and similar organizations (for example, 527 groups, 501(c)(4) groups, and other similar tax-exempt organizations whose primary purpose includes political activities). Each proposed contribution must be approved by the Senior Vice President, Public Policy and Government Relations.

Lobbying Activities

CenturyLink engages in lobbying activities to advocate our position on public policy, business and tax issues with elected officials and others in federal and state government. These are issues that affect our company, our employees and, most importantly, our customers. The company's Senior Vice President, Public Policy and Government Relations has oversight of all lobbying activities and expenditures. Other members of the company's Public Policy organization involved with lobbying include the Vice Presidents, Regional Regulatory and Legislative Affairs personnel and their respective direct reports.

CenturyLink complies with all disclosure requirements as prescribed by state and federal law. CenturyLink employees who are registered as lobbyists on behalf of the Company must also comply with company procedures for tracking and reporting activities and related expenses involving dealings with public officials and employees. CenturyLink lobbyists also are required to behave in a manner that meets or exceeds generally accepted standards of conduct of the profession. In their dealings with public officials and employees, all CenturyLink employees are required to comply with applicable federal and state laws, as well as the Company's policies on political activities, lobbying, and the exchange of business courtesies such as gifts, meals and entertainment.

Management and Oversight

CenturyLink values responsible corporate governance and participates in the political process to formulate policies that benefit our customers, shareholders and the communities we serve. In making political contributions, CenturyLink is committed to complying with laws and regulations governing the political process including campaign finance and disclosure rules.

CenturyLink encourages its employees' voluntary, personal participation in the political process, whether by voting, volunteering time, contributing money to the candidates of their choice or holding public office. When participating in the political process, however, CenturyLink employees must comply with the company's ethics and compliance requirements identified in the company's "Code of Conduct" and related corporate policies. The Code of Conduct, which is available on our website, sets forth the guidelines for appropriate employee conduct relating to political activity and contributions, as well as interaction with government officials and agencies. Employees are advised that personal political activities must never occur on company time and no company resources can be used. Additionally, CenturyLink does not reimburse employees, directly or indirectly, for political donations or expenses. Furthermore, CenturyLink adheres to a strict policy that no employee will be subject to any form of pressure, coercion or intimidation related to participation in political activities, nor shall any employee receive compensation or benefits for participating in personal political activities. Management of CenturyLink's participation in the political process is the responsibility of the Senior Vice President, Public Policy and Government Relations. This position reports directly to CenturyLink's Executive Vice President, Chief Administrative Officer and General Counsel.

Public policy updates are provided periodically to CenturyLink's Board of Directors and/or its designated board committees, including periodic reviews of the company's political strategy, contributions and activities. The risks associated with political and lobbying activities are managed in accordance with the company's enterprise risk management framework. In that regard, the Board of Directors and/or its designated board committees oversee compliance with the Company's policies and procedures regarding political contributions and activities.

In addition, the company's Internal Audit personnel and Corporate Ethics and Compliance Department assess the risk related to political activities, including spending, in connection with the company's annual risk assessment process.
