Scott Barnett

Vice President and General Manager, Department of Defense Practice

Scott Barnett currently serves as Vice President and General Manager of Lumen Technologies' Department of Defense practice. The global practice area, which is part of Lumen's Public Sector business, consists of Lumen's work with the U.S. Defense Information Systems Agency (DISA), the six military branches, defense industrial base and defense research and service providers.

Scott has been with the company for more than 25 years, after starting at Level 3 Communications in 1998. During his tenure with the company, he has served in leadership roles supporting the Public Sector, Wholesale, Enterprise, and Indirect Channel markets. His career in the technology industry spans more than 35 years, having held various leadership positions with Verizon, AT&T and American Mobile Satellite Radio.

Scott is an active member of the Executive Board of Directors for the Armed Forces Communications and Electronics Association (AFCEA International) and an active member of the Board of Directors for the United States Service Organization (USO) National Capital Region.

He also enjoys his volunteer activities with the Clover Leaf Therapeutic Riding Center, the Fairfax Re-Leaf Organization and Food for Others in Northern Virginia.

Scott holds a Master of Science Degree in management from National-Louis University and a Bachelor's Degree in business administration with a finance concentration from Radford University.

In addition, he has completed executive management and leadership coursework at the Wharton School of Business at the University of Pennsylvania, at the Daniels College of Business at the University of Denver, and the Keenan-Flagler School of Business at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

He is a Washington, D.C. native, married with two children and resides in Northern Virginia.
